COOK PAINTINGS BRING $16,938 AT AUCTION

Gainsborough, Reynolds and Corot Art Among Works Sold
Under the Hammer.

Forty-four paintings from the collection of the late Isaac Cook Jr.—including a Gainsborough, a Reynolds, and a Corot—brought $16,938 under the auctioneer's hammer last night at a sale conducted in the Cook residence, 3 Hortense place. It was the first major sale of pictures in St. Louis since 1914, when the collection of the late Reid Northrup realized about $35,000 on the block.

The Gainsborough painting, a bold sketch of Mrs. Siddons, the eighteenth century actress, went to W. H. Bixby for $3000, bringing the peak price of the auction. The Reynolds piece, painted on a wooden panel and called "Portrait of a Lady"—sold at $2850 to Max Safron, art dealer. Safron also bought the Corot, a study of sand and sea painted in a flat gray light, for $1150.

The bidding for the Gainsborough began at $1500, climbed to $2000, and mounted at $100 a bid to the final selling price. A minimum figure of $2500 was placed on the Reynolds by A. A. Selkirk, the auctioneer, before the bidding started. The Corot did not arouse much interest, bidding for it beginning at $1000 and closing at Safron's $1150. In further contrast to the interest in the two major pictures of the collection, was the apathy that greeted several fine pieces causing them to be withdrawn. A richly wooded hunting scene by Gustave Courbet drew one bid of $300, after which, except for the voice of the auctioneer, silence fell upon the crowd. It was withdrawn.

A water-color by Edwin Austin Abbey—the study of a sea-shore promenade—brought one bid of $200 and, when it went begging, was withdrawn. McCaughen & Burr, art dealers in charge of the sale, also withdrew a Delacroix, picturing the mad Quixote, which is said to have been bought 35 years ago for $4500. Producing one bid of $500, the picture was taken down.

Thomas Wright Buys Two.

A strongly executed pastel of women reapers in the field, by Leon l'Hermitte, was bought for $900 by Thomas Wright, investment broker, of Portland Place. He also purchased a Mauve water-color, a characteristic study of sheep and shepherd, for $550.

Next to the Reynolds and Gainsborough, the best prices paid were $1700, for a Cazin landscape, bought by W. H. Bixby; $1500 for the D'Aubigny—"Washerwomen on the Oise"—bought by A. S. Love, of 44 Westmoreland place; $1300 for a Jerome harem scene, with characteristic silken finish, bought by Bixby; $1000 for the Fortuny "Les Amis," a masterpiece in composition which took the Prix de Rome in 1856, bought by Bixby.

A George Hitchcock—"Field of Hyacinths"—was sold to Edward Faust for $275. He bought also a figure study by Meissonier for $250. A Vibert was bought by Max Weinberg for $275. John T. Davis bought a Boldini for $350. Other paintings—water-colors and oils—brought all the way from $5 up to $100.

Another Auction Friday.

It was announced that the paintings withdrawn last night, with several other paintings and some bric-a-brac, will be put up at auction Friday night, again at the Cook residence.

The late Isaac Cook Jr., was the son of the only maker in the country to achieve and market a successful champagne. He first took

40 Paintings in Cook Collection Sell for $16,045

200 Art Patrons Attend
Auction at Hortense
Place Gallery.

Approximately forty paintings of the collection of the late Isaac Cook, Jr., were sold at auction for $16,045 at the Cook residence at 3 Hortense place last night. About 200 persons crowded the art gallery of the residence, attracted by the opportunity to purchase the most representative group of pictures which have been offered in St. Louis during the last twenty years.

The top price was brought by a Gainsborough, a sketch of Mrs. Siddons, the English actress, which was knocked down to W. H. Bixby for $3,000. Bixby also purchased a number of other paintings. Cook purchased the Gainsborough thirty-five years ago for $1,000.

Sir Joshua Reynolds' "Portrait of a Lady" brought the next highest price, $2,850, which was paid by Max Saffron of the St. Louis Art Gallery. The portrait is considered a good example of the artist's work.

Jerome's "Moorish Bath," about the only nude in the collection, went to Bixby for $1,300, and Bixby also purchased for $1,000 a work by Fortunio Carbo, "Les Amis," which won the Prix de Rome in 1856.

Anton Mauve's "Sheep in Winter" was sold to Thomas Wright for $550. He also purchased a marine by Harry Chase, "Coming into Port," for $40. Another Chase, a small marine, went to Frank Healy for $41.

Edward A. Faust acquired for $250 "The Ordinance," by Meissonier. The work is a characteristic army scene done in pastel. Vibert's "Dignity and Impudence" went to Max Weinberg for $275. "Washerwomen on the Oise," by Daubigny, was sold to A. S. Love for $1,500.

A number of pictures were set aside when those present showed no enthusiasm to bid. The sale was conducted by McCaughen & Burr, with A. A. Selkirk as auctioneer. The sellers refused a bid of $300 for Gustav Courbet's "Hunting Scene in the Forest." Some paintings described by Selkirk as "decent paintings by decent painters," brought no general bidding and were withheld.

Cook, the son of the founder of the company which made Cook's Imperial champagne, died last July, leaving an estate estimated at approximately $500,000.

The sale will be completed Friday night, when additional oil paintings, miniatures, water colors and pastels will be offered.
